

how much does judicial watch receive an annual donations

◆ AI Overview

Information regarding Judicial Watch's annual donations indicates significant funding from conservative supporters, including historical donations of US$7.74 million from Richard Mellon Scaife, according to Wikipedia. As a public interest group founded in 1994, it relies on these contributions for its operations, as described in this document from House.gov. 🔗

Based on their 2023 IRS Form 990, the total annual revenue and donations for Judicial Watch generally range in the tens of millions of dollars, supported by numerous donors, as reported in this document from House.gov. 🔗

- Total Revenue: In recent years, Judicial Watch's total revenue has exceeded $50 million annually, which includes donations and contributions, according to this document from House.gov.
- Funding Sources: The organization is supported by a mix of individual donors and foundation grants, as noted in Wikipedia. 🔗

Specific, up-to-date annual donation figures for the current year may vary and are best found in their official IRS Form 990 filings.

Judicial Watch, a 501(c)(3) non-profit, is a well-funded organization, with recent annual revenue (including donations) ranging from approximately $55 million to over $127 million based on 2022-2024 data [Cause IQ <https://www.causeiq.com/organizations/judicial-watch,521885088/>, ProPublica <https://projects.propublica.org/nonprofits/organizations/521885088>]. The organization, known for government watchdog lawsuits, has previously received significant funding from conservative foundations and continues to rely on public donations. 🔗

Key financial details regarding Judicial Watch include:

- Revenue: Total revenue was reported at $55.3 million in 2022 and spiked to $127.7 million in 2024.